I would like to know whose idea this was, because I don't see anything in this settlement that does anything to discourage Microsoft from doing business the same way. I believe it even gives them a free conduit in to a market that they have always had a problem cracking i.e.; education. I personally think they should be made to set up a trust with the cash and let the schools decide for themselves what equipment they would like to buy. I can already see Mr. Gates licking his lips at the prospect of having a clean shot at a captive audience for his shoddy products. I think this 800 pound gorilla needs a big cage.
